Ought to Know Better.

In an article on social abuses the Boston Herald had recently an excellent appeal for the reform of a custom that is unhappily too prevalent among people who have, or at least are supposed to have the advantages of culture and refinement that the possession of wealth confers. This had custom is the unlimited serving of intoxicants at entertainments given by what is rather vaguely known as "society" and our esteemed contemporary says:

"Another reform which should be taken up under similar conditions is the laying down of a limit at these entertainments upon the use of intoxicants. It is a custom at these young people's dances to serve champagne, and in quite a number of instances this has been done with an unfortunate absence of moderation. Opinions may differ as to advisability of freely dispensing a stimulant of this kind at dances where the great majority of the guests are under the age of twenty-one. But even those hostesses who believe it desirable to follow the existing custom must, if they think of the matter at all, question the advisability of having it drunk to excess, for the benefit of all concerned, it would visability of having it drunk to excess. For the benefit of all concerned, it would surely be better to limit the serving of champagne to the supper hour, when those who drank it would do so with the minimum of resulting disturbance, rather than have it served at various times or at all times until the hour of departure, thus giving direct encouragement to something which rightly goes by an exceedingly hard which rightly goes by an exceedingly hard name.

"There are ladies prominent in the social life of Boston who, if they realized it, would not on any account do a wrong to a young man or young woman, or willingly be the cause of leading not overstrong young persons into temptation, and yet it is by no means impossible that some of these have, by their thoughtlessness, done not a little to undertake the moral resistance of those who have been the recipients of their hospitality. All that is asked is that matters should be brought within what every one would personally agree were reasonable bounds, but bounds now found somewhat difficult of establishment because there is no social code laid down, and there is a disinclination on the part of each hostess to set up an arbitrary standard of her own. It would be easily possible for fifteen or twenty social leaders in Boston to lay down a code of procedure in the matter we have Indicated, and possible in others, which practically all would observe."

Anatomical Effects of Drink.

Moved by the ever-increasing amount of drunkenness in France, a Paris physician is preparing for the instruction of the public a series of lantern slides showing the anatomical effects of the use of alcohol. It would appear that most of the diseases treated in the French hospitals arise from the use of alcohol. All alcoholic drinks are more injurious when taken on an empty stomach or between meals. The man who drinks every day alcohol in the form of liquors, or too much wine, becomes slowly poisoned. The effect of this poisoning is to destroy, more or less quickly, but none the less certainly, all the organs most necessary to life—the stomach, the liver, the kidneys, the blood vessels, the heart and the brain. Habitual imbibers of alcohol to excess are much more liable than temperate persons to filness, and when ill have much less chance of recovery. The investigations of the Parislan medical faculty confirm strongly the well-known fact that ed by the ever-increasing amount of confirm strongly the well-known fact that free drinking is a frequent cause of con-sumption from its tendency to weaken the

We sell less and less of it with each succeeding sell less and less of it with each succeeding year. People have quit drinking. It is no longer considered in good form to swill it. A drunken man is a disgrace. A tippler cannot hold a job anywhere that is respectable and progressive. The railroads won't have him, neither will anybody else. The sentiment is getting stronger against it all the time. The teacher, the preacher and the paper are all creating sentiment against hard drinking. In twenty years from now the whisky problem will have solved itself. Then soda water, lemonade and other light beverages will have crowded it out of the saloon and the drug store ed it out of the saloon and the drug store into the medicine chest of the doctor."-Centralia (Kan.) Necessity was not the mother of inven-lion when the process of manufacturing strong drink was invented.

The drink bill of Great Britain, just pub-lished, shows that the Englishman drinks 2.41 gallons of alcohol a year. Next to him comes the Scotchman with an appetite stacked with 1.66 gallons.

To countenance a wrong is to do a wrong. He who shelters a criminal becomes himself a criminal. He who legatizes a crime is morally a criminal and wrong cannot be rightfully legalized. Some people are showing a great concern lest the liquor traffic be established in our new possessions. Well, that is all right, but how about our own country? Is it more important to protect the black children of the Philippines than American boys at home?

The National Temperance Federation has prepared a memorial to the Canadian Government urging precaution against multiplying incentives to drunkenness and law-lessness in the northwestern parts of British North America. ish North America.

A saloon keeper discharged a clerk for getting drunk. A distiller advertised for two teetotalers to run his still. A drunkard is at a discount with all people. Even the devil wants a more respectable man than a drunkard to work for him. "Havana," says a recent writer, "Is get-ting Americanized very rapidly. American business men are pushing to the front. One of the first of these to offer his wares to the public is the irrepressible saloon man. American saloons are opening in all parts of the city."
